NASWA Launches New Learning System

June 05, 2020

For Immediate Release

WASHINGTON - The National Association of State Workforce Agencies (NASWA) announced the launch of a new Learning system for workforce agency personnel today. The new system provides courses and certifications custom-designed for busy workforce development professionals and others.

Learning opportunities are available on-demand and through scheduled virtual and in-person instructor-led training events. The new system offers multiple learning paths, including:

- Welcome to New State Administrators
- Executive Management
- Unemployment Insurance Professional
- Workforce Professional
- Technology Professional
- Employers/Third Party Administrators
- Information Technology Vendors
- Accessibility

Courses within the learning paths are developed in collaboration with workforce system and program area subject matter experts. As a result, the content is current, relevant, and tailored to the needs of the workforce system and program area staff.

For more information and to request access to the new Learning system or browse the catalog, visit naswa.org/learning.
