Insight into the various types of hearings, what to be aware of before accepting an invitation to testify, how to prepare your written and oral statements, what to expect on the day of your testimony and while you are testifying, and how-to follow-up after the hearing.

Examining how employers actually source, hire, and develop employees could have important and meaningful implications for how workforce development and unemployment insurance agencies deliver services. Which skills are employers finding most valuable? How do employers determine which candidates to invite for interviews. What types of investments are employers making in talent development? In this session, we'll tackle these questions and more leveraging LinkedIn’s data and experience working directly with companies on talent sourcing and development. Participants will engage in an interactive discussion about what the findings of LinkedIn’s latest research could mean for strategies around reemployment and job training programs.
