Who can use My Journey?

My Journey can serve anyone exploring education and work opportunities. It facilitates informed evaluation of career and program options from middle school through adulthood, and helps people set goals and take the steps needed to achieve them. From students searching for their first jobs to veterans returning to civilian work and adults switching careers, My Journey provides personalized recommendations and support along their entire education and career exploration journey.

How do states and or large workforce programs implement My Journey?

Our team works with your subject matter experts to craft the right plan for your unique needs. Our phased approach includes requirements discovery, user feedback collection, content creation, training and marketing. Your leadership can stay focused on bringing the right people to the table to drive buy-in and helping those you serve find meaningful careers and education programs.

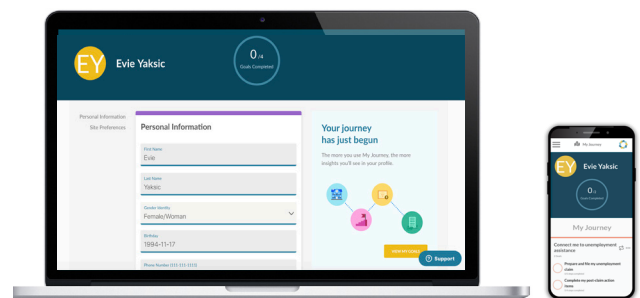

How does My Journey organize data across agencies and organizations?

My Journey has many tools natively integrated, such as employability skills assessments, experience mapper, career pathways and more. It's flexible structure easily integrates existing content, websites and forms from across your organization into a common user experience. It's quick to implement and easy to add data integrations over time so you can rapidly respond to changing conditions or national and local emergencies.

How does My Journey help job seekers?

Our rapidly changing digital economy and current global challenges mean individuals are continually bombarded with numerous career and education choices. My Journey allows users to share their journeys with professionals, parents, counselors, and case managers for enhanced collaboration on progress, next steps and milestones. Workforce networks and governments can encourage life-long learning and continuously evolving careers for everyone by aligning their approach to helping individuals navigate options.
